

To characterize the mechanical properties of the polymer to be used as the matrix material in a new composite material system it is often necessary. Thermoset polymer specimens can often be cast to finish dimensions in open molds.